NOT CHURCH REGALIA. - Assistant Secretary Spaulding has denied an application for the free entry as church regalia of certain manufactures of silk forming parts of church vest-ments intended for the chapel of the convent of Des Feliciennes at Detroit, Mich., on the ground that no articles except such as are completely made up are included in the term "regalia" as used in the tariff act. The ar-ticles were classified as manufactures of silk

Spaulding has informed the Secretary of State, in response to a question raised by the United States consul at Paso del Norte in regard to landing certifiates for merchandise ostensibly consigned to one person but consisting of lots destined for final delivery by him to various persons, that in the opinion of the Treasury Department a holder at the foreign port of the bill of lading issued to him by the common carrier may be considered as the consignee within the contemplation of the statute, and that a landing certificate executed by such consignee is sufficient.

Be Probably Sent in Tuesday.

The gossips uptown around the Treasury Department are scanning every sign that promises to reveal the identity of the successor to Secretary Windom, but they are making little or no headway against the mystery. They all have the name of Foster on their lips, as he seems to be the most likely man in sight. The alleged conference between him and the President in New York yesterday has been effectually disposed of by Gov. Foster's denial.

IN CONGRESS TODAY

object of the gentleman in saying a few words was not to prevent the forty minute debate allowed under the rules after the previous question was ordered.

Mr. Cannon replied that he would answer frankly in the affirmative. In view of the motions already made on the democratic side, under the lend of the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. McMillin), the republicans accepted notice that the gentlemen on the democratic side did not desire to facilitate business. He would make a few remarks and then demand the previous question.

A REED AND McMILLAN TILT. SENATE.

On motion of Mr. Davis the Senate, after the transaction of routine morning business, proceeded to the consideration of pension bills unobjected to.

There were 130 pension bills passed in the space of forty-five minutes. Among them was one giving a pension of $50 a month to the widow of Fear Admiral Steedman, one increasing the pension of Brigadier General Landram of Kentucky to $50, one increasing the pension of a widow of a soldier of the war of 1812 and one giving a pension of $12 a month to Mary Morgan Edson of Vermont, six of whose some had served in the Union army in the war of the rebellion. All these were House bills.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL BILL. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the Nicaragua canal bill, giving the guarantee of the United States government to the company's 4 per cent bonds to the amount of $100,000,000.

The bill having been read in full, Mr. Edmunds said that in the necessary absence of the chairman of the committee on foreign relations (Mr. Sherman) it was his duty to take charge of the bill for the time being. The subject was not a new one. The natural importance of having the kind of interest in the Nicaragua canal which the bill provided for had been fully discussed in the Senate two or three years ago.

Besides, the report of the committee was so Mr. McMillin asked for tellers on the yeas Besides, the report of the committee was so full and complete and condensed that he did not feelcalled upon at this time to take up the time of the Senate in again going over the grounds stated in the report—especially in view of the very complete and able observations of the Senator from Alabama (Mr. Morgan) some day ago. day ago.

Mr. Vest, in opposing the bill, disclaimed any hostility to the Nicaragua canal project, although he had favored Capt. Eads' Tehuantepec ship railroad project. He took no part in the cheap attacks upon Great Britain and remarked that, while aggrandizing tendencies of Great Britain might be denounced, it should be remembered that the United States had the same characteristic coming from hereditary and social peculiarities. At the risk of being misconstrued he asserted that no greater calamity could come upon the world than a war between the United States and Great Britain. It would destroy com-merce on every ocean and would involve countries in autagonisms, difficulties and losses of life and property which no intelligent man would ever wish to provoke. It was, therefore, of importance that in considering the pending bill the relations between Great Britain and the United States in regard to inter-oceanic com-munication across the isthmus should be con-Senator Spooner, Representatives McAdoo, Bliss, Burton, Morrow, Cannon and Atkinson. But the question was not as to whether it should have been made or not. The question before the Senate now was as to the attitude of Great Britain in relation to that treaty and as to what would be the result of the United States, assuming the treaty not to be in existence, and without any conference whatever with Great Britain, proceeding to legislate as if that treaty had never been made.

If Separators would place themselves in the rest. legislate as if that treaty had never been made. If Senators would place themselves in the position of officers of the British government they would appreciate what he said when he declared that the question was a most important one to the people of the United States. In the face of the question which he was considering it did not matter as to public opinion in the United States, except as to whether the American people would justify a war with Great Britain in order to pass the pending bill. If Great Britain assumed that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was in existence (and the Senate United States would act under similar circumstances, and if Great Britain should, in spite of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, undertake to build a canal across the isthmus without the consent of the United States, the Senators had no right to assume in the light of history and logic that the people of Great Britain were not as jealous of their national honor as the people of the United States were. On the contrary, the government of Great Britain was the most tenacious of all governments of mational and individual rights. Whatever might be said of British propensity to aggrandizement, conquest and commercial and territorial dominion, it had to be conceded that no government had ever excelled that of Great Britain in protecting her national honor and the individual rights of her citizens.

> Mr. Morgan (to whom the inquiry was addressed) said that he was not aware that the question had ever been discussed diplomatically and that there had been no occasion for having it discussed. If the United States remained in its present attitude it would not be discussed for a hundred years and there would not be an interoceanic canal for 200 years.

TWO CENTS.

Mr. McMillin inquired whether it was the gentleman's purpose to attack him and his mo-tives and then to move the previous question and cut off debate.

Mr. Cannon disclaimed having made an attack upon anybody.

Mr. McMillin said that this was a proposition to increase the salaries of judges while the ap-propriation bills were still pending. Mr. Cannon replied that it was a proposition to put the court and the salary bills into con-ference if the majority wished so to do.

Mr. McMillin responded that the gentleman had announced his program and had said that after talking a few moments he would shut off after talking a few moments he would shut off debate. If that was the program to be pur-sued the democrats would meet it at every point. [Democratic applause.] This was a proposition to take care of repub-lican dead ducks, and was an effort to increase salaries while the republican party was linger-ing superfluous on the stage after the people had denounced it.

THREE MINUTES TO GET HIS BILE OFF. Mr. Cannon said that he would yield the gentleman from Tennessee three minutes. He wanted the gentleman to have an opportunity to get all the bile off his stomach. Mr. G. B. Taylor—Why is the gentleman from Tennessee so excited?

Mr. McMillin asked for tellers on the yeas and nays, and strenuously objected to the Speaker's refusal to entertain his demand. THE DEMOCRATS LEAVE THE HOUSE.

THE RULES HAVE BEEN CHANGED The vote having been concluded Mr. McMillin lemanded its recapitulation. This demand the Speaker declined to enter tain on the ground that it was for the purpose of delay.

Mr. McMillin retorted that it was a delay that had never been denied by any predecessor of the present Speaker.
Precisely, answered the Speaker, but the rules have been changed.

IS HE A CANDIDATE?

The statement published today that Mr. Cleveland has decided that he will not accept

Mr. Tracey of New York had a personal letter from Mr. Cleveland within four days. No reference is made in it to any purpose on the part of the writer to withdraw from the field of presidential possibilities, though the character of the letter gives opportunity for such an avowal were it in his mind.

On that subject he says merely that if a majority of his party are opposed to him he is standing in no one's way. This may indicate an indifference as to the result, but it certainly gives no indication of a purpose to place himself out of the reach of his party if they want to nominate him.

MR. TRACKY DOES NOT BELIEVE THE STORY.

Mr. Tracey would be very apt to know as

Ex-Secretary Whitney being asked about the story that he had a letter from Mr. Cleveland declining to be a candidate in '92, said: "The story is without any foundation of truth whatever."

SENATOR SHERMAN DEPARTS.

ON ITS WAY WEST. The Train Bearing the Remains of Ger Sherman to St. Louis.

PITTSBURG, PA., Feb. 20.-All through the long night the solitary light in the funeral ca burned above the casket in which lay the remains of the last of the great commanders of the war of the rebellion. All night long a solitary watcher in the blue and crimson of the artillery uniform paced silently up and down the narrow passage beside the casket. Through sleet and driving wind the long funeral trais climbed the steep mountain grades. The track was slippery, but the train kept steadily on at a good rate of speed. Only two stops were made during the night—at Altoona and New Florence.

Florence.
Altoona was reached at 4:05 o'clock. There was a stop of about five minutes and the change of engines was made. C. W. Culp, the train master of the Pittsburg division, took charge of the train at Altoona. Rev. S. P. Kelly of Kane Post, No. 259, of Pittsburg, of the local recep-tion committee boarded the train at Altoona, although no one was up to receive him, and he did not see any of the committee of although no one was up to receive him, and he did not see any of the committee of escort until Pittsburg was reached. A reporter of the Pittsburg Press also got on at Altoona. The engine that took the train out of Altoona was No. 813, in charge of Goo. A. Cassidy, a member of the Union Veteran Legion, who served under Gen. Sherman. H. B. Evans was his freman and F. P. Fogarty the conductor who book the train in charge. Only one other too was the train in charge. Only one other stop was made before morning, at New Florence, where water was taken.

There was no demonstration there and nonmarked the passage of the train in the early morning, except the tolling of bells in one or two towns, until Edgewood was reached. There a stop was made at 7:27 to take on board the three children of Thos. W. Fitch. VETERANS' SILENT TRIBUTE.

The Edgewood G.A.R. post was drawn us along the platform. The veterans stood in the rain with heads uncovered until the train pulled out of the station. At Wilkinsburg there was a Grand Army post drawn up on the platform, but the train made no stop there.

Just after the train entered the limits of Pittsburg Mr. Filch's children were taken forward by the members of the Sherman family to the car where the casket lay. The guard retired and left the family alone with the dead Before Union station was reached they left the

The clerk proceeded to call the roll and (following the precedent set last session) the great body of the democrats arose and left the hall. The vote resulted—yeas, 12: nays, 150—the clerk noting a sufficient number to constitute a quorum, and the motion was lost.

The question then recurred on the demand for the previous question, and having demanded the yeas and nays, Mr. McMillin, by a signal of his hand, directed the democrats who were in the cloak rooms to come forward to his support. Having obeyed the signal long enough to accomplish Mr. McMillin's object, the democrats once more disappeared.

The report does not come from sources particularly friendly to Mr. Cleveland, and, of course, the anti-Cleveland men seize upon the story with great cagerness. Mr. Cleveland's closest friends in Congress, however, know nothing of any purpose on his part to decline the nomination, and do not believe the story.

TRACEY.

The exceptional action of the House yesterday in holding two distinct legislative sessions on the same calendar day gave rise to some confusion this morning as to what journal should be read. A brief debate arose, during which Mr. Springer (Ill.) remarked that this proceeding was in line with the unprecedented character of this session.

The Speaker—The language of the gentleman from Illinois during most of this session has been of the same unprecedented character.

The journal of last night's proceedings was read and approved.

Mr. Flower (N.Y.) presented a petition of H. B. Classin and other merchants of New York in favor of reciprocity with Canada. Referred.

THE RIGHT OF CITIZENS TO VOTE.

WAY CLEVELAND SHOULD BE A CANDIDATE.

There is a very particular reason pointed out why Mr. Cleveland should be a candidate if he is in earnest in his fear of the result of free coinage, as he undoubtedly is. It is argued that to any one who looks well into the matter without prejudice that Mr. Cleveland can easily get the nomination.

It is almost as apparent that no other man who is openly opposed to the free coinage of silver could get it. While many democrate in certain sections may disagree with him on this question, the whole party is in accord with him, and he is their leader in the tariff fight.

If Mr. Cleveland declined now it would seem from any one who looks well into the matter without prejudice that Mr. Cleveland can easily get the nomination.
